A CANAL SCHEME.

New York Capitalists Organizing a Syndicate

To Build a Canal Across the State of Florida.

Saving a Journey of Fifteen Hundred Miles.

A Florida Enterprise

NEW YORK, November 30 The Post says A syndicate is in process of formation to carry out the plans of the Atlantic and Mexican Gulf Canal company, which received a fresh charter this year from the legislatures of Georgia and Florida together with grants of valuable lands and water power The charters were issued to Governor Gates of Florida, and his associates among whom are General Easley of Florida Judge H H Tompkins of Georgia and Colonel Rogers of the Georgia Central railway. Alexander Curtis of Georgia, secretary, is now in this city on business connected with the composition of the syndicate. Curtis today gave an account of the company's project to the following effect The route of the proposed canal has been surveyed by General Quincy A Gillmore and assistant officers of the United States engineers under a resolution of congress directing measures to ascertain the best water line for transportation from the mouth of St. Marys river on the Atlantic coast through Okeechobee swamp and the state of Florida to the gulf of Mexico The importance of the proposed canal as a national work was urged by President Grant in two messages to congress in which he declared that valuable as our opening of this great internal water way would be in time of peace, its existence and custody in time of war would be of absolutely incalculable value to the nation The surveys made by General Gilmore extended over two years and their results caused him to report the canal scheme eminently feasible As evidence of the importance of the enterprise to the country at large he stated that no less than twenty two states and territories were actually interested in the opening of water ways, the practical results of which would involve far most of the traffic of the Mississippi valley and all its tributaries General Gilmore stated that products along thirty thousand miles of rivers and water ways already teeming with commerce could in this way be borne to safe and commodious harbors, and that only by this work was it possible to avoid heavy and almost prohibitory taxes on commerce necessitated by approach to the mouth of the Mississippi through the Gulf of Mexico The canal, in the language of the company's charters, is to be of such dimensions as will be deemed suitable and capable of being used by all such boats, steamboats, tugs, barges and other craft as navigate the Mississippi river above New Orleans Beginning at the mouth of St. Marys river, which forms the dividing line between the states of Georgia and Florida, it is to run through Okeechobee lake, (which is to be used as the summit of level supply) thence to St. Mark's on the Gulf of Mexico thence it will follow the already existing line of water ways which extends almost unbroken from that port to New Orleans Advantages of this route will be a saving in commerce of heavy rates of insurance rendered imperative by the dangerous navigation of the Bahamas and the reefs of Florida and in the coasting service, saving in distance 1,200 to 1,500 miles. Official statistics go to show the average tax on commerce through high insurance, etc., over the present route is about $5,000,000 yearly From this it would appear that deepening the passes at the mouth of the Mississippi by jetties, however great a local success, does not detract in any way from the importance of this canal, as the special difficulty to be overcome lies in the Bahamas and Florida reefs

Range Cattle Interests

DENVER November 30 —The following letter was addressed to President Cleveland to day

OFFICE OF INTERNATIONAL RANGE ASSOCIATION
DENVER, Col., November 30 1886

To His Excellency Grover Cleveland president United States

The time has come when that branch of the commercial interests of our country represented by the live stock industry feels that it should no longer plead for attention to its claims. I am empowered by the stock growers of the plains who have more than six hundred million dollars invested in cattle alone, to respectfully invite the attention of your excellency to the imminent danger threatening them by the extension of quarantine lines which have interfered with the movement of stock from the ranges of Texas will severely cripple the resources of the earth I feel confident justice demands that in your forthcoming message to congress some suggestion may be made that the interests of legislation be extended to examination of the cattle business which has grown to such proportions as to demand for it the fostering care of the government as well as the protection of the laws which have proved so beneficial to other industries. The cattle industry is now in a condition which exposes its owners to the imposition of exorbitant prices for the products of the plains, and the cattle industry asks for it such attention in your message as will meet your commendation Respectfully,

[Signed] R G HEAD
President International Range Association

Manager of the GAZETTE.

Range cattlemen have important interests sadly in need of national legislation, but it is not likely that the letter sent to the president yesterday will reach congress through the annual message. That document is reported as already completed, except in reference to naval affairs.

Among the last acts of Henry M. Stanley before leaving England was to offer his services to the English government in conducting an expedition to relieve Emin Bey, governor of the southwestern provinces of Egypt. When last heard from, over a year ago, he was still holding out against the Mahdi's adherents, and was unaware that Khartoum had fallen. The difficulty is to inform the combatants that the war is over.

Newspapers reported Dr. Holmes as saying in his speech at the Harvard banquet that Emerson came from "the dirtiest sectarian circle of the time in the whole country." It will be seen that he has a well grounded grievance against the proof-reader from his statement that what he said was "daintiest" instead of "dirtiest." But more frequent publication of his remarks and writings by the daily press would make him accustomed to these little slips and less sensitive.

The state canvassing board puts Congressman Symes' plurality at 803 in a vote of nearly sixty thousand. But little more of the off-year apathy would have given Colorado a democratic representative. Thousands felt too little interest to go to the polls, and the vote was eight thousand less than two years ago. Most of these absentees voted the republican ticket then. Prohibitionists have reason to be satisfied with their showing, the vote being an increase of forty-five per cent over that of '84.

Congressman Gibson of West Virginia, whose district is a close one, is disgusted with the head of this administration, whom he blames for the party's losses. The following language was used by him in a recent interview: "It was not indifference. It was rebellion. There is no use for an army to throw down its arms and attempt to capture an organized, well-drilled enemy. It can't be done. The administration has destroyed our organization, and two years more of such work will not leave enough to constitute a respectable mob."

The result of the election in California is a striking example of how popular feeling is being aroused against the participation of railroad and other gigantic corporations in the determination of local and state elections. The whole power of the railroad companies in California was arrayed on the republican side, having as its ultimate object the election of Hon. A. A. Sargent, ex-U. S. senator and ex-minister to Germany, to the United States senate. The issue was made on Mr. Sargent's candidacy and there is comfort in the fact that he was defeated. His election would only have added one more to the list of corporation senators which already is too large for the transaction of any business which has in view the limitation of the powers of railroad and other large corporations.

The assembly of Knights of Labor in New York city have inaugurated a movement whose success will be desired by the general public as contributing to the welfare of the order and the elevation of labor perhaps more than efforts in the political field under present conditions. Incorporation has been secured in order to become a property owner, and the first act of the new corporation was to buy a hall, the price of which was seventy thousand dollars. The present intention is to buy or build half a dozen similar halls within the jurisdiction of the assembly, for the purpose of opening day and night schools for the instruction of members and their children in drawing, modelling, etc. Useful sciences will also be taught. Knowledge is power, and the present movement is a step in the right direction.

The Solid Muldoon, in its last issue, shows up the inconsistency of the ruling faction of the Colorado democracy in the following manner: "Upon state and national issues the Muldoon's democracy is of the Jacksonian stripe, and, while we have but little use for Mr. Cleveland's civil service views and none whatever for his monometallic tendencies, we have at least sufficient candor to give him credit for a consistency and honesty of purpose that many of his critics do not possess. Messrs. Patterson, Thomas and Arkins, a trio of Colorado's most violent and perpetual critics, censure the executive for not replacing the Garfield-Arthur holdovers with simon-pure democrats, contending, mind you, that those who acted with the republican party prior to the late presidential contest are of the species known as jackwumps and entitled to no recognition beyond a back seat, and yet when the democracy of this state is represented in convention, three some critics managed by persuasion and the eternal brass of Rhode, to hobnob for the honest elective office within the gift of their party or this people, an individual who a democracy beats even date with Cleveland's election. Gentlemen, a little more consistency and a little less rot."

The Duke of Richmond and Gordon, Earl of March, was shot in the knee the other day while shooting in Harle woods, Epressbie, by one of his party. His grace was stunned by the shot but is now in a fair way of recovery. One of the beaters was at the same time shot and rendered insensible.

The little daughter of Senator and Mrs. Van Wyck, now 3 or 4 years old, has an odd name—Happy New Year Van Wyck. She was born on the first day of the year, and the senator wished to commemorate the occasion by giving her a name suggestive of it.

President Taylor of the Mormon church has sent a letter to Secretary Lamar in which he says that the future of the church over which he presides "is indissolubly connected with the land." He thinks it possible that in the future the Mormons may found colonies outside of the United States.

Mr. Sweeney's Cat.

By Bill Nye.

Robert Ormsby Sweeney is a druggist of St. Paul, and though a recent chirographical record reveals the fact that he is a direct descendant of a sure-enough king, and though there is mighty good purple, royal blood in his veins that dates back where kings used to have something to do to earn their salary, he goes right on with his regular business, selling drugs at the great sacrifice which druggists will make sometimes in order to place their goods within the reach of all.

As soon as I learned that Mr. Sweeney had barely escaped being a crowned head, I got acquainted with him and tried to cheer him up, and I told him that people wouldn't hold him in any way responsible, and, as it hasn't shown itself in his family for years, he might perhaps finally wear it out.

He is a mighty pleasant man anyhow, and you can have just as much fun with him as you could with a man who didn't have any royal blood in his veins. You would be with him for days on a fishing trip and never notice it at all.

But I was going to speak more in particular about Mr. Sweeney's cat. Mr. Sweeney had a large cat named Dr. Mary Walker, of which he was very fond. Dr. Mary Walker remained at the drug store all the time, and was known all over St. Paul as a quiet and reserved cat. If Dr. Mary Walker took in the town after office hours nobody seemed to know anything about it. She would be around bright and cheerful the next morning, and attend to her duties at the store just as though nothing whatever had ever happened.

One day last summer Mr. Sweeney left a large plate of fly-paper with water on it in the window, hoping to gather in a few quarts of flies in a deceased state. Dr. Mary Walker used to go to this window during the afternoon and look out on the busy street while she called up pleasant memories of her past life. That afternoon she thought she would call up some more memories, so she went over on the counter, and from there jumped down on the window-sill, landing with all four feet in the plate of fly-paper.

At first she regarded it as a joke and treated the matter very lightly, but later on she observed that the fly-paper stuck to her feet with great tenacity of purpose. Those who have never seen the look of surprise and deep sorrow that a cat wears when she finds herself glued to a whole sheet of fly-paper cannot fully appreciate the way Dr. Mary Walker felt. She did not dash wildly through a $150 plate glass window, as some cats would have done. She controlled herself, and acted in the coolest manner, though you could have seen that mentally she suffered intensely. She sat down a moment to more fully outline a plan for the future. In doing so she made a great mistake. The gesture resulted in gluing the fly-paper to her person in such a way that the edge turned up behind her in the most abrupt manner and caused her great inconvenience.

Some one at that time laughed in a coarse and heartless way, and I wish you could have seen the look of pain that Dr. Mary Walker gave him.

Then she went away. She did not go around the prescription case as the rest of us did, but strolled through the middle of it, and so on out through the glass door at the rear of the store. We did not see her go through the glass door, but we found pieces of fly-paper and fur on the ragged edges of a large aperture in the glass, and we kind of jumped at the conclusion that Dr. Mary Walker had taken that direction in retiring from the room.

Dr. Mary Walker never returned to St. Paul, and her exact whereabouts are not known, though every effort was made to find her. Fragments of fly-paper and bristle hair were found as far west as the Yellowstone national park, and as far north as the British line, but the doctor herself was not found. My own theory is, that if she turned her bow to the west so as to catch the strong easterly gale on her quarter, with the sail she had set and her tail pointing directly toward the zenith, the chances for Dr. Mary Walker's immediate return are extremely slim.

Sunset on Mont Blanc

London Standard

A large audience assembled at Toynbee hall, Whitechapel, on Saturday evening, when Mr. Leslie Stephen delivered a lecture on "Among the Alpine Dangers." Mr. Stephen said that a hundred years ago nobody seemed to look at the Alps for themselves until Rousseau made them fashionable, and Byron and other English poets followed suit. In 1856 Professor Forbes and Mr. Ruskin wrote certain books about them which so fired the imagination of some young men that they determined to get to the top of these mountains. In 1857 they formed the Alpine club, and at the end of the following year had got to the top of nearly every mountain in Europe. In 1861 attempts were made to break down the monopoly in the Alps of the guides of Chamonix, and to the latter's assistance the sense with guides that no any tourists who had been from a distance. His party consisted of Mr. Kennedy and three guides, and they thought wood to attempt the ascent by one of the largest glaciers instead of by the usual route. An accident to one of the party necessitated their return to the village.

Another attempt was made as soon as possible, and this proved successful. He had ascended Mont Blanc four times altogether, and on the last occasion witnessed the sunset from the top of the mountain. The impression created on him by this spectacle was a lasting one. The first sign of the setting of the sun was that the mountains began to light up with that extraordinary Alpine glow which was like nothing else in the world, and which seemed to be a sort of mysterious solid fire gleaming along the whole range of glaciers; and between them and himself, as the evening mists rose, it seemed as if there were a great sea of some transparent, ethereal, bluish fluid. Then suddenly he became aware of a great dark triangle that was cut out of the twilight. At first he hardly knew how to account for this, but he soon saw that it was the great shadow of Mount Blanc itself that was gradually creeping down the valley, and seemed as though it would go the whole way to the distant horizon. Presently this shadow, by some curious effect, appeared to climb up into the sky. Then all the mountains disappeared, and the dark shadow sprang up and began to envelope the moon, rising pale and ghastly opposite the sun. The final spectacle was witnessed from a lower altitude. The immense range of snowy cliffs was turned livid and ghastly pale to the side against the sun, and on the other side was still glowing and ruddy against the dark night that was coming up, and far away beyond the Lake of Geneva there was a great orange band of light breaking over France.

Disjointed Joints.

Detroit Free Press.

"There comes another!" said the hardware dealer, as he interrupted a conversation about the state of the iron market and tried to hide his body behind that of the reporter. The latter was on the point of asking for an explanation when a citizen hailed and said to the dealer: "Oh, yes, you sent that stovepipe up yesterday afternoon, didn't you?" "Yes, sir." "Told me I wouldn't have the least trouble in fitting the joints?" "I—I think I did." "Think! why, blast your old swindling vocation, you know you did; you said a boy 10 years old could put up a hundred links of it in an hour! Not one infernal joint would go together, though I worked for three hours; don't you never speak to me again—never. I do admire a sharp thief but I have no respect for an old liar!" "Why don't you punch his head?" queried the reporter as the man passed on. "Why don't I punch all the heads in town?" asked the dealer just as a second came to a halt and puckered his mouth to say: "You can send up for that stovepipe!" "Yes, sir." "That stovepipe I lugged home last night." "I remember." "That stove pipe over which I swore and swore until midnight and then smashed flat and flung into the alley?" "I'll send for it." "And I could have mashed you with it you old slibtongued hyperbole; send for it; remove it; don't never let's another honest man in the face!" "No, sir. I never will," humbly replied the dealer as he opened his door to escape a third man with blood in his eye coming across the street.

Anima's Love Lavender

The Rev. J. G. Wood in "Little Snow Flake."

A short cut to the heart is by the lavender field. It is to be found in lavender water, a fact which I discovered by accident. I took Mrs. Lee, who is a leopard cat, was so interesting an inmate of the household, trained the animal almost entirely by taking advantage of his love for this perfume. So, wanting to be on good terms with the leopard, "Old Man," I took some lavender water with me. Before giving it to the leopard, I thought I would try its effect on Jessy, a fine tigress, who has for some time been very gracious in her conduct toward me. I poured a few drops of the perfume on a small piece of brown paper, and held it to her. She first gave a little sad sniff, and then scraped the paper out of my hand, and laid it on the floor of the cage. First, she sniffed at it repeatedly, raising her nose high in the air after every sniff. Then she tore it into little pieces, which she strewed over the floor. Then she rolled over and over on the perfumed fragments, giving a series of muffled yelps of delight, and then began leaping all over the cage, springing up until her head struck against the roof, turning over in the air, and coming down on the boarded floor with a mighty thump, as might be expected from an animal weighing more than three hundred pounds.

Next, I tried the one I had leopard "Old Man" who occupied the next cage and found that he was even more powerfully affected than the tigress, slobbering over the perfume until the floor of the cage was quite wet, and rolling over and over exactly as his neighbor had done. Meantime the "Empress" who occupied a cage on the opposite side of the building, had scented the lavender water from a distance, and was loudly expressing her opinion that she had been shamefully neglected. So I gave her a liberal dose of the perfume, and she, being only a young thing, and unaccustomed to self control, straightway proceeded to go mad over it.

Superintendent of the Water Works Frost is putting in a fire plug on Kiowa street, which will place the deaf mute Institute under the protection of the fire department.

The December term of the county court began yesterday. The civil case of Hedgepath against Wilson occupied the time and attention of the court yesterday afternoon.

In the last few weeks several persons have been more or less injured by falling down the embankment immediately to the east of the Free Methodist church on Cheyenne avenue. The embankment is very steep and on very dark nights cannot be seen. The accidents alluded to have been caused by pedestrians walking off the embankment and some of them have been of a rather serious nature. It has been suggested that a fence placed around the edge would serve as a protection against injury.

Alamo arrivals.—J. N. Nell, St. Joe, Mo.; E. T. Looman, Key West, Fla.; Geo. B. Riddell, John A. Evans, Miss Thomas, Miss Maynard, Chas. M. Thombs, M. Linn, Denver; J. Arthur Connell, Woodland Ranche; C. W. Mason; C. N. Davids, E. Y. Lambeth, city; C. A. E. Orme, ranche; M. D. Leonard, St. Louis; Grant Metcalf, Silver Cliff; C. Hornington, Platte Canon; J. E. Cole, Buena Vista; John Nolan, Manitou; W. H. Cooper, Edward M. Boggs; C. M. Ry.; C. R. Husted, Husted; Albert G. Clarke, Denver.

Yesterday's hunt was begun under a discouraging condition of weather. The wind, though very warm, blew a perfect gale, and consequently the scent would not lie. At the meet was quite an assemblage, the field consisting of about fifty imports, while those in vehicles numbered probably a couple of hundred. The hounds were cast off at the Tenney ditch on Cascade avenue, and they slowly worked their way northward for about a mile, then striking off to the east toward the bluffs, where they found the scent. But a short run followed when the scent was again lost. For a matter of eight or ten miles there was no continuous running, but about four miles east of town, when every one was heartily discouraged and thinking of home far away, the hounds put up a coyote and gave chase very quickly, the field following in a dead run. The coyote struck out on a bee line for the bluffs and succeeded in getting in earth safely with the hounds and a dozen or so of the field pretty close on his heels. The run after the coyote was about two miles—the distance being made in about five minutes. The members of the hunt are very enthusiastic over the success of their second attempt. Notice of the time and place of the next meet will be given in Thursday morning's paper.

The Colorado School Journal in its last issue has the following to say of Professor W. H. Payne of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who will deliver an address on "Education Value of Studies" at the annual session of the state teachers' association this month: "It is with much pleasure that we read in the programme of the state teachers' association, published elsewhere, that W. H. Payne, professor of pedagogies at the University of Michigan, is to be present at the meeting. Mr. Payne is one of the best authorities we have. As superintendent of schools of the little city of Adrian, he demonstrated the possibility of making a system of schools the very best for the people. His volume, published at that time, on school supervision, was the first, and stands to-day as the only helpful book to the young superintendent who inquires for methods of practical detail in management. Moving from Adrian to the professor's chair, the ten years past have been spent by Mr. Payne in profound study. We welcome him to Colorado with heartiness. He is no extremist, has no elements of a demagogue, is modest, dignified, scholarly and polite. His expressions in the national council of education are received with grave consideration. To meet and listen to Mr. Payne will be sufficient recompense for a trip to Colorado Springs were no other attractions presented."
